MONTGOMERY ON NATO

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, who has in operational command of all Allied troops landing on the Normandy beaches on D-Day, 1944, said recently the present organization of the Allies in Europe was unsuitable.

Montgomery said that the first job the Allies would have, in case of a new emergency, would be the job of winning control in the air. He said that Western air forces could not gain much control unless all air forces of the Western powers were organized and controlled as a single weapon.

In addition, Montgomery said the creation of armored and infantry divisions was an obsolete program: He believes divisions should be standardized, all of them including many tanks, and that they should be modernized to function in an atomic age.

Montgomery also said direction of a new war should be conducted from North America, by a single political authority. Moreover, he said he thought training and organizatton along the lines he recommended should begin at once, since a new war would give the democracies no time to prepare themselves—as has been the case in the past.

Montgomery went so far as to say that military direction of a new Global war should be in the hands of one supreme military authority and that this authority should control worldwide operations, with a commander appointed for that specific purpose. He added that the commander should be an American, since the United States possessed the largest strategic air force in the world today.

Montgomery, who caused much speculation recently when he called huge aircraft carriers obsolete, said he thought atomic weapons would eventually make army reductions advisable.

The Field Marshal's statements are stimulating, and we believe they are generally sound. Nevertheless, the degree of cooperation between nations envisioned by Montgomery will be almost impossible, in peacetime, and, therefore, we think there is little chance the Western powers will adopt his "single military authority" proposal.

A NOTE FOR THE LADIES

We dedicate this short editorial to members of the fair sex. Many of them think they have many problems, and indeed they might have, some real and some imaginary.

However, if a few moments of thought are given to comparative conditions for women in the United States and in other countries, we believe an attitude of thankfulness and grateful appreciation of conditions in this country will result.

A report from Germany, from women who had been imprisoned in Russia in recent years gives an idea of what we are thinking about. The German women who were imprisoned in Russia were kept in barracks containing 150 women each. They were forced to do very heavy work, in very cold temperatures. Most of them were located within the Artic Circle.

These women were used primarily to clear the railroads and often were required to do heavy repair work on the railroad with primitive tools. As a result, many died from overstrain and few of the returning prisoners reached Germany in good health.

It is the custom in Russia to use women for street-cleaning jobs and other tasks which are performed in the United States by members of the opposite sex, as a rule.

The example is only one of a number which could be cited throughout the world. In many countries, women still do not enjoy anything like equal rights with men, in many they are not allowed to vote, and in others, the number of wives allowed a husband is anywhere from two to more than ten.

It seems obvious, in view of these circumstances, that American women should take a little time each day to be thankful that they live in the United States of America. We sometimes have so much to be thankful for that we fail to appreciate it and enjoy it as we should.

COLD WINTERS AHEAD?

Several forecasters have predicted the coming winter will be one of the coldest in many years. It is said that the trend toward warmer winters, which was reversed to some extent last year, will be further reversed this year.

In other words, a trend toward cold winters seems to be setting in—if the forecasters are right. In the last decade, or even longer, most weather observers have concluded that a definite trend toward warmer winters are underway.

Whether colder weather in some sections last year, and the expected colder weather this year, is a reversal of this long-term trend and one which itself will continue for a decade or two, no one can say.

It is significant, however, that for the first time in many years colder winters are expected, and there are those who look for this winter to be the coldest in many decades. Frankly, we are a bit skeptical, but we will all know the answer in a few months.

EXIT: MOLOTOV?

V. M. Molotov, old-time Bolshevik, who has landed on his feet in many a shake-up in the Kremlin, might be about to get the axe. In fact, he may get the axe by the time you read this.

More probably, Molotov will give his swan-song at Geneva, later this month, at the meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers. The foundation for this belief is Mootov's recent "admission" that he has been "theoritically mistaken and politically harmful" in expressing certain views.

He had said, early this year, that only the foundations of socialism had been established in the Soviet Union. While this technically is correct from the Western standpoint, it is not the pink-cloud stuff which the Communists like to believe.

Whether the Communist bosses are actually concerned over this, or whether they are using it as a way to rid themselves of Molotov, who, incidentally, signed the non-aggression pact with Hitler, opening the way for the German attack on Poland in 1939, is a good question.

Nevertheless, it appears that Mr. Molotov is going the way that Georgi Malenkov went. If Mr. Molotov does go that way, he will be lucky to escape with his hide intact. When one admits a mistake in Russia, and is a High official, he is indeed fortunate to continue breathing.

Malenkov is still operating, so theer is hope for Molotov also, but if the present leaders in the Kremlin allow too many former top officials to hang around, they must face the possibility that some day these dissidents will organize or attempt to overthrow the government.

In Fashion Now

Perhaps the flapper age is returning. Lame is the high-style fabric of the coming winter season. The lame suit has gleamed its way to the top of the afternoon fashion picture. Satins, taffetas, peau-de-soie, wool and many of the new materials, such as orlons, are being shot with silver and gold threads.

The outstanding colors for winter will be warm and bright. Burnt amber, red, clear green, reds, purple smoke gray, blue blazes,coke, green fire and coke green, and gold. Gold is being teamed with all the warm colors, and gold shoes, bags and evening hats will be very smart.

Fur trim will be popular for evening and sports clothes. The latest shoulder strap arrangement is detachable straps made of mink. Mink is used for bows on the skirts of long foamy chiffon dresses. Mink evening bags with rhinstone trim and matching mink-trimmed gloves for cocktail clothes will come in all colors of velvet and satin. The fur hat and bag will again be fashion news for sports events.

Pierced materials and prints have long been popular for spring and summer dresses. This winter figured dresses in soft zephyr wools will be worn. Flower prints will be outstanding. One rose-print-on - black dress will feature a matching cost of black taffeta with immense red roses embroidered on the lining.

Convertible type necklines are found on many dresses. Worn one way the dress is suitable for the office. Do a bit of changing, and the dress is ready for dinner and dancing.

The Republican national chairman said that it was for the President to decide whether a sense of duty should compel him to seek re-election.

Beauty expert says that women prefer to be brunettes.

Health and Beauty

A few daily exercises will keep the figure trim. There are so many exercises for every defect in the human figure, beauty and posture that it is a wonder that all of us don't have a perfect shape. Some are of little use when compared to others and it is a good idea to know the good from the bad.

Because of the great number of exercises, women are as confused as to which ones to take as they are about what cosmetics to buy. Actually, you need to take only a few exercises each day. Fifteen or twenty minutes spent in exercises will greatly improve figure and health.

Each day the average women should take a couple of abdominal exercises. These are of benefit to health, and of course, the abdomen is one of the spots which is apt to accumulate fatty deposits as we accumulate years.

Two waist exercises, two for the thighs and inner upper leg line, two hip exercises, two postural exercises, two for whatever your personal figure problem might be.

These will tire you at first and make your muscles sore if you are not accustomed to exercise. For this reason, it is a good idea to start with just aa few exercises and work up to the fifteen or twenty minutes you plan to take as a regular thing. Do not let anything short of illness keep you from your exercises. It is the regular exercise that does you good.

Don't use the excuse that you are too old. There are exercises designed for more mature people. There are also exercises designed for the new mother that will not only help her to get her figure back in a hurry, but will make her feel better faster. These usually start in the hospital before the mother is out of bed. At this point they are very mild. The exercises are increased gradually until the new mother is taking regular exercises.

DIGS UP $50,000

Dallas, Texas.- While digging a trench for a local plumbing firm, Jackson Davis, 24, of Corsicana, found an old thermos bottle in which was more than $50,000. He immediately quit his job and went back to Corsicana. Some of the money was in gold certificates, which Jackson didn't recognize as currency, but he made a down payment on a house and bought a new automobile and a television set. However, he was charged with theft and turned over more than $43,000 of the money which remained unspent to police. The owner of the house under which the money was found said it was apparently buried during the depression by a relative, who died about 20 years ago without revealing the presence of the cache.
